The Story of Positive Words Research

My name is Elena Daniela Calin and I started researching positive words in 2012. I started my research with the word Gratitude and then with Appreciation. In January 2013 I created a blog PositiveWordsResearch.com. On this website I started to build a list of positive words. I added one by one the positive words to the list because I first wanted to understand them myself. And then something magical happened. People around the world started commenting on the list and suggested new words to add. Therefore, the list became viral on the internet between 2013 and 2014 and became the best list of positive words in the world. When people put "positive words" in the Google search box, this list comes first in the entire world. Currently, this list has over 1,300 positive words.

PositiveWordsResearch.com has over 16 million views since 2013 until now.

Between 2014 and 2016, I've created the list of positive words in 15 more languages, the major languages of the planet. These lists are first in Google searches. I also created a second English list with a collection of over 5000 positive words. In some countries the list created by me is the online one. For example in my country, Romania, I've created the first and the only list of positive words in my native language. I've also created 2 online applications and an iOS mobile website application.

Anca Istrate joined the project in April 2017, especially for various projects with positive words for Romania.

List of international positive words

1. 'Bilita mpash' – it comes from Bantu, a language from Central and South Africa and it means a beautiful, blissful dream (the opposite of a nightmare).
2. 'Trouvaille' – it comes from French and it is a correspondent for a lucky find, something good or valuable that you discovered by chance. Most of the times it is associated with clover because it is the symbol of luck.
3. 'Agape' – it is a Greek word that is the feeling of selfless, unconditional and devotional love for someone it is something like love but in a different way of thinking.
4. 'Hachnasat orchim' – it comes from Hebrew/Yiddish and makes you a person that brings guests and offer hospitality and respect to strangers. This is a popular way to live in those countries.
5. 'Kæk' – it is a Danish word and it suggests that someone is bold, cocky (not in a pejorative sense) with a gung-ho spirit.
6. 'Samar' – it is an Arabic word that is used when you sit together in conversation with people at sunset or in the evening.
7. 'Suaimhneas croi' – it comes from Gaelic and it means that you are feeling happiness or contentment for finishing a task. It is a sign of perseverance!
8. 'Nakama' – it is a Japanese word for someone that is your best friend, someone you feel deep, platonic love for.
9. 'Yuán bái' – it comes from traditional China and it is a sense of complete and perfect accomplishment.
10. 'Apramāda' – it is an old Sanskrit word and it means moral watchfulness or awareness of the ethical implication of one's actions.
11. 'Singurista' – it is a Philippines word from a dialect called Tagalog, and it's used for someone who would not initiate an action unless certain of obtaining the desire result.
12. 'Cafuné' – it is a Brazilian word meaning the act of tenderly running one's fingers through someone's hair.
13. 'Wabi-Sabi' – it is a Japanese word for a way of living that focuses on finding beauty within the imperfections of life and accepting peacefully the natural cycle of growth and decay.
14. 'Hyggeling' – it is a Danish word, its "literal" translation into English gives connotations of a warm, friendly, cozy demeanor, but it's unlikely that these words truly capture the essence of a hyggeling; it's something that must be experienced to be known. I think of good friends, cold beer, and a warm fire.
15. 'Mahalo' – is a hawaiian word meaning gratitude, thankfulness, admiration, esteem, respect.

What is our current work focus?

1. A book about Positive Words in English and Romanian;
2. A Positive Words manual for children (with types of exercises for workshops, themes, positive words explained);
3. Speeches/Workshops in companies, elderly homes, schools, kindergartens, support groups, NGOs, wellness centers, hospitals;
4. Services for companies - written communication analysis between employees; proposing various techniques for communication improvement and offering a vocabulary of positive words that we provide in Romanian and English;
5. Continuous promotion of the Positive Words Research project.

What are our greatest dreams?

1. The list of positive words to be accessed by any person in the world once a year by any age, in any language, in different formats (either online or in a book/manual, workshop, mobile application, inspired by a bracelet - will have instructions attached to the bracelets).
2. Introduction of positive words courses in schools around the world to be studied by children before going to college.
